DESCRIPTION

Set of 3 black-lacquered wooden nesting tables, designed by Ricardo Blanco, an Argentine designer active in the 1970s.

These nesting tables stand out for their simple and functional design, featuring horizontal cutouts that add lightness and modernity to the set. Their bentwood structure allows for practical nesting, perfect for saving space in everyday use.

Ricardo Blanco, although little known internationally, left his mark on Argentine design in the 1970s with discreet yet effective creations, emphasizing utility and simplicity.

Height varies from approximately 15.4 to 18.1 inches.

Origin: Argentina, circa 1970.
