DESCRIPTION

Dining table in laminated pine produced in France circa 1970, with mountain provenance.

The rectangular top features generously rounded corners and visible laminated pine slats creating a natural and regular rhythm across the surface. It stands on four cylindrical legs, also made of laminated wood and directly attached beneath the top. The proportions are balanced, with a grounded and stable presence. The design is straightforward and solid, conceived for daily use in an alpine setting.

The warm tone of the pine and the laminated construction, selected for structural stability in changing climates, place this table within the context of 1970s mountain furniture, combining functionality and restrained form.
